Volume 7, Issue 2
Summer 2011

FAA-CGAR Faculty of the Year Awards

Every year, four faculty members from the CGAR member universities are selected and awarded FAA-CGAR Faculty of the Year. This year's recipients were Leslie Martin from the University of North Dakota, Dan Macchiarella from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, Jim Higgins from the University of North Dakota, and Greg Walker from the University of Alaska Fairbanks.

Dr. Steven Hampton, Director of CGAR, and Pete Sparacino, FAA-CGAR Program Manager, presented each recipient with a certificate for outstanding achievement in aviation research and education at their respective universities.

CGAR Annual Meeting 2011

Hosted by the lead university, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, in Daytona Beach, Florida, this year's CGAR annual meeting celebrated "a decade of Research supporting General Aviation." A review of CGAR's achievements and contributions to the world of General Aviation kicked off this celebratory annual meeting. A representative from each member university shared the experience CGAR has offered to their university in the past decade and the meaning of this collaboration between universities and the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

The two-day events included the review of the most recent projects conducted by the CGAR team members, such as Weather in the Cockpit Technology (WTIC), Remote Airport Lighting Systems (RALS), Edge Runway Guard Lighting (ERGL), F Industry Training Standards (FITS), Safety Management Systems (SMS), and Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS).
